Our Speakers Include:

William (Bill) Griffith was appointed as the Director for the Agriculture Center of Excellence in August of 2013. Griffith comes to us from Walla Walla Community College's long running and successful Turf Management program, as instructor and program coordinator for 20 years. Griffith has 15 years of direct industry experience as a golf course superintendent at courses in Oregon and Washington. He has led many professional organizations and boards over the past 30 years serving golf courses, Washington Associations, and instructing students at a postsecondary education level. Griffith has served as President of the Northwest Turfgrass association (two times), President of the Inland Empire Golf Course Superintendents Association, and a board member for 25 years.

Peter McCormick founded TurfNet back in 1994 in response to what he saw as a need for objective, unbiased information in the golf course industry. He also needed a job, as his ten-year run as sales manager for both Toro and Jacobsen distributors in New Jersey had just come to a close. So, McCormick threw caution to the wind and followed his dream of owning his own business, while also breaking new ground with the first fee-based information service in the golf turf industry. 22 years later, he and a small staff -- along with a large group of contributors -- are still at it and going strong. McCormick has a BS in plant science and business management from Rutgers University. After 50 years in the pressure cooker of New Jersey, he and his wife, Patty, relocated in 2008 to the more bucolic environs of the Champlain Valley of Vermont. They and their two Golden Retrievers split their time between Vermont and an island in the Canadian Maritimes. Following his mantra of "learning something new every day", McCormick's latest challenge and passion is learning to play the guitar... which he freely admits has changed his life for the better.

Steven McDonald is the founder of Turfgrass Disease Solutions, LLC, which is an independent research and agronomic support company based in the Mid-Atlantic region. McDonald has over 15 years in the golf course management business, working at both private and public golf courses. He received a B.S in Turfgrass Management from Delaware Valley College and a M.S. in Agronomy from University of Maryland. McDonald consults at more than 125 golf courses each year and research efforts focus on plant protection, weed control, fertility, and cultural practices of fine turfgrass. McDonald is an instructor in the Professional Golf Turf Management School at Rutgers.

Steve Randall, Director, Chapter Outreach, has been with GCSAA since August 2006. During that time he has worked with numerous chapters in areas of association management and strategic planning. Randall came to GCSAA from the Sun Country Amateur Golf Association in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he served as the executive director from 2001-2006. Prior to his position in New Mexico, Randall served as the media relations/regional affairs director for the Minnesota Golf Association, where he also worked with junior golf from 1998-2001. Randall earned his Bachelor's Degree in Business Management/Communications, from St. John's University, Minn., in 1988 and a Master's Degree in Mass Communications from the University of South Dakota in 1992. He actually began working in the golf industry while at South Dakota State University where he served as men's/women's golf coach and assistant sports information director from 1994-98.

Special thank to

for moderating the roundtable event.

Preparation is key to ensure the discussion flows smoothly with timely and pertinent topics. We appreciate Kevin for making it look so easy.
